Polsinelli Secures Patent Infringement Verdict for R&R Solutions

(Nov. 13, 2026) Polsinelli secured a significant victory for client R&R Solutions, with a jury verdict in a patent infringement action against Evenflo in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Arkansas.

The dispute involved R&R Solutions' patented child car seat monitoring technology, designed to alert caregivers when a child is left unattended in a vehicle. Following a seven-day trial, the jury found that Evenflo induced infringement and contributorily infringed all asserted patent claims. The jury also determined that Evenflo's infringement was willful. The verdict marks a significant outcome following six years of litigation and reflects R&R Solutions' commitment to protecting its intellectual property rights.

The trial team included Shareholders Jay E. Heidrick and LaTasha M. Snipes, Principals Adam P. Daniels and Joshua L. Rayes, Associate MacGregor Greenlee and Paralegal Kimberly K. Murray.
