Andrew Geha advises clients on mergers and acquisitions, dispositions and other corporate transactions. Combining experience in private practice and legal operations leadership, he helps clients navigate the legal, commercial and execution-related considerations that shape transactional matters and business agreements.

Before joining Polsinelli, Andrew served as Vice President of Legal Operations at Project Fortress. His experience working at the intersection of transactions, contracting and business operations informs his approach to corporate counseling, giving clients practical guidance that reflects both legal requirements and the realities of implementing and managing complex business arrangements.
