Anthony Springfield has an innate ability to understand people and his clients business issues. Anthony becomes familiar with their business, recognizes their potential legal issues, and is there to advise and assist them – both inside and outside the courtroom.

Anthony is a hard worker, leader, and problem solver. He has served clients through the Polsinelli Toxic and Mass Tort Litigation Practice Group for more than 18 years.

Anthony defends companies in the areas of product liability and toxic and mass tort litigation. He represents various manufacturers, suppliers, and premises owners in claims involving toxic exposures and product liability actions. These actions include construction and automotive products, as well as electrical and industrial equipment.

He works with clients to develop comprehensive litigation and risk management strategies and assists in the successful negotiation and resolution of cases, which ultimately impacts the clients' bottom line. When those avenues are not successful, Anthony is ready and able to defend clients' interests at trial.

He is committed to delivering positive results for his clients and has significant experience in:

- All elements of the discovery process
- Identifying and preparing expert and corporate witnesses for trial testimony
- Developing and implementing trial strategies
- Serving as trial counsel in numerous jurisdictions for companies involved in toxic and mass tort litigation, including product and premises defendants.

Anthony joined Polsinelli because of its reputation as an entrepreneurial firm, providing its clients with the highest level of quality and service in business and litigation. That same spirit and energy continues with the service Anthony provides to his clients every day.
