Ashli C. B. Dade supports health care clients in litigation and disputes, assisting with matters involving organizations across the health care industry. She contributes to case development through legal research, drafting and analysis, helping teams evaluate claims, prepare filings and respond to issues that arise throughout the dispute process. Her work supports attorneys representing clients in matters shaped by the regulatory, operational and business considerations unique to health care. Her undergraduate studies in political science and pre-medicine provide a technical foundation for work involving health care organizations and medically informed disputes.
