Iqra Iqbal represents clients in trademark, copyright, trade secret, and patent disputes. She works with technological companies, consumer brands, and growth-stage businesses operating in competitive markets where intellectual property is central to enterprise value. She advises startups and established companies on protecting and enforcing their intellectual property through strategic negotiation, licensing, and litigation in federal and state courts.

Iqra handles complex disputes involving brand protection and confidential information. Her practice includes pre-suit enforcement strategy, cease-and-desist matters, licensing negotiations, and high-stakes litigation. She develops enforcement strategies aligned with her clients' business objectives and resolves matters efficiently through negotiated resolutions or trial.
