Jennifer Eng understands that every client's business, and the disputes they face, are unique and deeply significant. She is committed to learning each client's business operations and goals, enabling her to accurately evaluate the impact of current or potential disputes and develop strategies tailored to each client's specific needs. Whether handling complex litigation involving multi-million-dollar projects or resolving critical issues for small businesses, Jennifer provides the highest level of advocacy in every matter.

Jennifer brings a breadth of experience to her practice and regularly represents corporate clients in disputes involving breach of contract, fraud and a wide range of business torts. She has worked with clients in the energy sector and she has significant experience defending product liability and toxic exposure actions throughout the country. Jennifer is also adept at navigating the complexities of the appeals process, including direct appeals, interlocutory appeals and extraordinary writ practice.
