Advocating for clients is what Susan Henderson Moore enjoys most about her chosen profession. Susan represents clients with a variety of public policy interests, including the areas of health care, financial services, economic development, and transportation. Located in Jefferson City, Mo., she works with Missouri legislators and executive branch officials to achieve positive public policy results for clients. They rely on her to provide quality legal counsel and strong strategic advice on complex issues involving the legislature and executive branch. With over fifteen years of public policy experience, Susan has the critical skills necessary to deliver results for clients in Missouri politics and policy. She has experience:

- Advising clients on policy agenda development.
- Drafting legislative and administrative law proposals.
- Providing strategic advice on issues involving challenging political dynamics.
- Maneuvering clients through government procedures and administration.
- Researching substantive statutory, constitutional and legislative issues.
- Negotiating with other key stakeholders on legislation to find a workable solution for interested parties.

Prior to joining Polsinelli, Susan served as an attorney and assistant director for the Missouri Senate Division of Research for seven years. In this non-partisan position, she advised and drafted legislation for all 34 senators of both political parties. She drafted hundreds of bills, prepared extensive research proposals, and staffed several standing and interim committees. Susan maintains those positive professional relationships and credibility with legislators and public officials of both political parties.
